Name Origin: Race is named in honor of the riding great from yesteryear who is best known for guiding Dan Swigert's Baden-Baden to a two-length victory in the 1877 Kentucky Derby at the age of 17 for eventual Hall of Fame trainer Edward Dudley Brown. William "Billy" Walker Sr. was born enslaved in 1860 in Woodford County, Ky., began riding at age 11 in 1871 and witnessed every Derby for 59 straight years from its 1875 debut until his death at age 73 on Sept. 20, 1933. The African-American jockey was Churchill Downs' leading rider at six of the track's first 13 meets (Fall 1875, Spring '76, Fall '76, Spring '77, Spring '78 and Spring '81). One of his greatest moments at Churchill Downs came aboard 7-year-old Ten Broeck in the famed four-mile match race with the California-based mare Molly McCarthy on July 4, 1878, a contest remembered in the bluegrass music standard "Molly and Tenbrooks." When Walker's riding career ended after some 25 years, he became a trainer, was recognized as an expert on breeding and bloodlines and served as an advisor to John E. Madden, who bred five winners of the Kentucky Derby: Hall of Fame inductees Old Rosebud (1914), Triple Crown-winner Sir Barton (1919) and Zev (1923), as well as Paul Jones (1920) and Flying Ebony (1925). He also served as a clocker at Churchill Downs' Spring and Fall Meets. Walker's unmarked grave was discovered at the Louisville Cemetery near Germantown in the mid-1990s, and Churchill Downs placed a headstone detailing his memorable racing career at the resting place prior to the 1996 Kentucky Derby.
